OYSTER RIVER BOG TRAIL

Rockland, Rockport, and Thomaston, ME

The Oyster River Bog, also known as the Rockland Bog, is an unusual 6,000-acre woodland nestled amid busy mid-coast communities. The Bog is an area rich in history and diverse in natural resources. Woods, streams, wetlands, and peat bog offer prime habitat for an impressive variety of wildlife and plants.

The 6.5-mile trail crosses the headwaters of the Oyster River and traces portions of its primary feeder stream, Keene Brook. There is a confusing network of active and abandoned woods roads in this area, so be careful to stay on the trail by following the blue blazes.

The combination of this trail and the Thomaston Town Forest section of the Georges Highland Path provides hikers with a continuous ten-mile trail.

DIRECTIONS TO THE TRAILHEADS

The trailhead at the north end of the trail is on Route 90, 1.8 miles west of the intersection of Routes 90 and 17 in West Rockport. The southern trailhead is at Jack Baker Woods on Beechwood Street in Thomaston, 3.3 miles south of the intersection of Beechwood St. and Route 90 in West Rockport.

The Jack Baker Woods trailhead is located on Beechwood Street in Thomaston, 3.3 miles south of the intersection of Beechwood St. and Route 90. The trailhead at Thomaston Pollution Control is at the end of Booker Street off Route 1, across from the Oceanside High School sign. The Water Tower trailhead is up a dirt road off the western end of Route 1, across from the Thomaston Green.

GEORGES HIGHLAND PATH

A Unique System of Trails

The 50+ miles of the Georges Highland Path are built primarily on privately owned land thanks to handshake agreements. Please respect the rights of these generous landowners during your visit. Without their participation, this trail system would not exist.

The Georges Highland Path has been described as a "hikers hiking path" and the maintenance standard aligns with a desire to provide a back country experience within minutes of the busy towns of midcoast Maine. Expect tree roots, rocks to scramble over, wildlife, and a wonderful time!

Thanks to our sponsors and contributions from people like you, we are able to keep these trails available to all who seek the inspiration and solace of the natural world.
